

We the People of New Rokamabari believe that with good laws and values, we will prosper. One of our fine values is education for the youth because we believe that everyone has the right to learn. Another one of our values is known as religious freedom. We believe that everyone should be able to practice any religion and be tolerant of other religions. And our final value is government. We believe that we should have a representative government and should vote for our leaders.

Our laws are as follows:

- Children over the age of four must be in school.
- Under our government, everyone has equal rights.
- Everyone has the right to practice any religion or not practice anything at all.
- In our government, everyone has the right to participate in politics.
- If you don't have a proper education, you have to get a lower-class job.
